CORRESPONDENCE

Editor Review-Advertiser—Your editorials of the past few weeks have been of great interest to farmers. Some of your arguments are good, especially those relating to the need of a better community spirit; the advisability of building up good home towns, etc. If we are to keep the homes together we must have something to work for. Without a home the prairies would become measurable, and permanent home making would become a lost art. The writer has no time to waste on words so he will get down to "brush ticks," as they say.

The present condition is brought about by a lack of enterprise in business methods. A few men in the west see the advantages they would have if they eliminated the wholesalers. By the aid of a large aggregation of capital, they went into the world's markets and purchased for spot cash from the manufacturers, the cost of transportation of grain, drivers, and expenses. Being able to buy in large quantities and pay cash, they got all the discounts and lowest prices. In certain lines they became manufacturers themselves.

On the other hand, our country merchants buy from old-established dealers, who have their own debts, and have to ask for credit. The great difference between the two systems becomes apparent at once and at the same time furnishes us with a few explanations as to why the catalogue is popular with the farmer and a large percentage of town people as well.

Facts are stubborn things to deal with, and our business men might just as well face the music now as later. They cannot, and will not, beat the catalogue house as long as they carry the old time wholesaler on their backs. Not all the assistance given by the government, the Farm Women's Association, "The Progressive Farmers," "Organizing for Economic Resources," "Our Non English Speaking Neighbors," and also conducted a helpful round table conference on Rural Church Co-operation. Mr. H. W. Wood, President of the U.F.A., gave several inspiring and instructive addresses on "The Social Minister and Rural Economics," "Problems," and "The Farmer's movement." Dean Hayes, of the Faculty of Agriculture, of the University of Alberta, addressed the conference on "Production of Field Crops in Alberta," and "Consolidated and Rural Schools." Mrs. W. M. David also gave an inspiring address on "Municipal Hospitals." Mrs. Parthy, President of the U.F.A., spoke on "How the U.F.A. A. is trying to meet the needs of the Farm Women." Addresses were also given on such topics as, "The County Show," "Rural Sanitation," "Preventive Diseases," "Rural Recreation," etc.

Such conferences are of special value in times like these, and assist in a very real way in solving the social and economic problems that are facing us. The hopeful signs of progress are visible, and the welfare and services that was struck by all the lectures and which seemed to provide the whole conference.

It is to be hoped that next year a great many from this community will be able to attend the conference, and benefit by its helpful instruction.

Conference for Rural Leadership

By Rev. W. E. MacNiven

Last week in Edmonton, there was held under the auspices of the Extension Department of the University of Alberta, a unique conference for "Rural Leadership." This is a new movement full of vast possibilities.

The conference was an unqualified success, which it was decided to make it an annual affair.

The Extension Department went to much trouble and expense to make the conference the greatest success possible from every stand point. Men of expert knowledge in their fields were secured, and their lectures were of immense value bringing to us the product of years of study and research.

Rev. J. S. Woolworth, Director of the Bureau of Social Research for Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba gave lectures of great inspiration. In the evening's fight, Mr. McKinney was supported by J. E. Atkinson and went down under a series of blows of his opponent. The ladies refused to mount the ring and consequently what might have been the most exciting contest of the day had to be postponed until next sports day in Claresholm.

The sports day up about 7 o'clock and the highlight of the day one of the most delightful and successful Sunday School treats ever held.

The prize winners in the children's races were as follows: Three legged race, girls Mary Edlund, Annie Foss,

Three-legged race, boys Nat Steeves, Eric Swanson,

Boys up to 5 years, Runy McLean, Lucy Bangs,

Boys up to 5 years, Frank Tavel, Leonard Shearer,

Girls 5 to 7, Florence Atkinson, Olympia Foss,

Boys 5 to 7, John Edlund, Roy Dill,

Girls 8 to 10, Jean Laidlaw, Margaret Boyd,

Boys 8 to 10, Charley Sharples, Edgar Nelson,

Boys 11 to 13, Annie Foss, Mary Edlund,

Boys 11 to 13, Harry Paulson, Eric Swanson,

Soda biscuit race, girls, Minnie Paulson, Julian Edlund,

Bug race, Spencer Murray, Little Paulson,

Fat ladies race, Mrs. Geo. Ringrose,

THANKS

The Sunday School committee wishes to thank Mrs. Sharples for the use of the grounds, which helped to make the picnic so enjoyable.

Also it deserves to thank the car owners who so kindly loaned their cars and their services.

Serbian Relief

Among so many suffering Serbs must not be forgotten. She did not hesitate to challenge an immensely superior force, and to sustain all the trials and tribulations that would attack all the lectures and which seemed to provide the whole conference.

Battle she received—and now she lies destitute. A nation in exile! Living, God knows how, on the produce of our hands until such time as we can have her set up again to restore her children to their hearths.

Their chain mailment is a personal claim on our hearts and our purses. We must not shun this responsibility.

Many writers in modern periodicals have tried to describe the retreat of the Serbian army. One we recall an American writer who described in a general, full of the amazing patience and endurance of the Serbs

under stress that would have shamed less bold and less skilfully crafted folk.

Ours is the easy part of the war compared to that of the Serbs. We must not forget this.

S. S. Picnic

By Rev. W. E. MacNiven

The S. S. picnic last Tuesday was just what everybody desired. Long before 10 o'clock the children began to gather at the church. The weather was ideal, and ours, of which were plenty, ladies with young and old, settled right on the spot for the Sharpshooter. No better sport can be found with easy accessibility from Claresholm for such a purpose. Swings were hung from the trees, and tables erected in short time, and while the children paddled and bathed in the creek a sumptuous meal was prepared for them by ladies present.

There were many games which took place in the afternoon.

The potato fight, while sitting on a rail, was perhaps the most amusing sport of the day.

Eric Swanson and Fred Chambers came out victors in the boys fight.

In the girls' fight, Mr. McKinney was supported by J. E. Atkinson and went down under a series of blows of his opponent. The ladies refused to mount the ring and consequently what might have been the most exciting contest of the day had to be postponed until next sports day in Claresholm.

Thistles are numerous at different places along the creek, and year after year they are left to run to seed and grow to a height of 6 feet.

We hope that those who can afford to do so will gather them and burn them.

What a fine road there is to Clare-holm!

There is a bad mud hole

about every mile, and it requires considerable courage to attempt the trip.

Mrs. R. G. Bissell is visiting in Meadow Creek for a short time.

Frank Hobbes has been paying a visit to this district recently.

There are reports of some special attraction here.

He, however, claims he knows nothing of it, although his brother insists that there is.

Miss Adel De Forest opened school at Scherzer Monday last.

Miss C. Vance was the bucking contest at the Meadow Creek exhibition, and also the foot race for the championship of Alberta.

Foot racing on Sunday is not just the thing, but when the ladies indulge in it we of course keep them.

Mr. C. Crawford has moved his family to town where they will have the benefit of the town school.

Meadow Creek

Mrs. James Brendling left for England on Friday to join her husband who is a Private in the 13th.

Everyone has been trying to get their vacation in, but the wet weather has limited greatly.

J. V. Vance has 80 acres of wheat ready to cut. It is the earliest crop in the district. Mr. Vance only had Tuesday finished leading a ear of wheat (1600 bushels). It graded 1 northern and is now worth $1.75 a bushel at Fort Williams.

Thistles are numerous at different places along the creek, and year after year they are left to run to seed and grow to a height of 6 feet.

We hope that those who can afford to do so will gather them and burn them.

The only obstacle, is the ignorance of the ratemakers of the advantages to be gained by consolidation.

They Don't Like Prohibition

Early this month the annual meeting of the Hudson Bay Co. was held in London. In speaking of the position in which that had come into force.

Canada—the chief argument is that the Company had been hard hit, that the laws were drastic and detrimental to the Company's interests, that having been advised that their rights were being infringed upon, the Company would take the necessary measures to protect their interests.

Even the original directors of the Company do not understand the temper of the Canadian people. If they attempt to foist upon the country a business that the people have almost unanimously voted out of the country, the people would probably ultimately vote a complete break-off of the Company. A man of the rank of the directors would spend a little time in the country, that has enriched them. They would at least learn the best way to deal with the drink curse which is "England's worst enemy." Here we are learning to value human life and happiness before anything else. A nation that has lost its grip on its people and families has been rolling in wealth, but for generations the books of the company show them heavily in debt, and there is a little hope that they will ever be free. The Hudson Bay Co. has always put profits before other considerations. But the people of Canada are in a different position to the people of Labrador and the far north. The Hudson Bay Co. has been doing a pleasure at its annual meetings in London, but Canada is not going to tolerate any more the curse of the drink traffic in its midst.

There was another cause, and then Hugo said:

"I'm going to tell you a dead secret. Everybody in the house knows it, but I can't tell you yet, you know, and I couldn't tell you, we were bound by law of everybody."

It must be an old sort of secret if everybody knows it, said Hugo. I am sure it is, but he should like to be the solitary exception.

"You can't be that, because my father and mother don't know it. Nobody does."

Lady Emmeline was gurgling, curious, in spite of her protests. Hugo stopped her, and gave her a sidelong glance to burst out his story.

"There was a robbery committed here," he said, "but I can't tell you what it was."

"A burglary! How dreadful!"

"Well, as to it, it was a burglary. I don't know who did it, but Mrs. Mamie had some valuable pearls. So Paul and I went after him. Paul's Pawns gone with him."

A cloud, even darker than the one on the girl's bright face. She had received Lord Eastling's confession of the secret, but she had not told Mamie she had done so.

The girl was unhappy, and indeed she found no time to do much but sit.

"Lord Ursula was particularly curious to see Lady Creswell, having not been able to get a moment's respite from her anxiety whatever they might be."

"She was a short silence.

"I'm very sorry about it," she said privately, in low voice.

"So am I. It makes everybody uncomfortable to have a middle house, a burglar in it."

Ursula could not but look forward with curiosity to the meeting between the two girls, and the secret which she had heard a great deal.

It seemed that Lord Creswell had proved a most brilliant success in his new business, and had made a large sum of money.

Lord Ursula was particularly curious to see Lady Creswell, having not been able to get a moment's respite from her anxiety whatever they might be.

"She was a short silence.

"I'm very sorry about it," she said privately, in low voice.

"So am I. It makes everybody uncomfortable to have a middle house, a burglar in it."

"Yes. Where's Ursula?"

The girl was thinking somewhere in the chain of thought that connected these two topics: the loss of the pearls, and the secret which included there was not. For Lady Emerson's mind had passed rapidly from the pearls to the secret.

Paul and Finchel and Lord Eastling had all gone up to town, leaving alone the two young ladies as to Ursula's visits and position.

Ursula's name was mentioned by one of the other ladies, electing her. She's a famous hand. The people love her, and she has a way with her, the right way of talking to them, and, they say, it's not put out for the occasion.

"It was here that she met Paul, wasn't it?" said Lady Emerson.

"It was here that she met Paul, for that match."

"She seems quite happy, doesn't she?"

"There's a cynical touch about that smile of Ursula's."

"She blushed."

"Is there?"

"I think you're quite right. Marriage is an awful thing."

"Well, it has one advantage; it's not an expense."

"Don't you think so?" said Hugo, sitting on the wide window ledge, and looking at Ursula with a smile.

"Why, no. How can anyone, who doesn't want to marry, somebody can make him?"

Hugo leaned back, sighing, and said he had so longed to be persistent that she wondered whether he would not end by making itache.

He had so longed to be persistent that she seemed so easy to avoid, that you're drawn fatally ever nearer and nearer to your liberty and your ease and your happiness, and all the while you don't know it, and you don't know it.

Even after you've taken the poison, you still walk about and smile and run and walk and hunt and laugh, and do everything just as if you were still free.

So that you haven't a chance of getting free of it, until the fatal moment when you're married.

He ended by the most dramatic change of voice, and also uttered the words he had longed to hear.

"The great interest in her face to see how she took this eloquent speech, however, was rather disconcerting, and he deplored it.

Lady Emerson drew herself up with a slightly uplifted expression.

"If I were to feel as you do," she said, "I would be a fool, and I would be a fool indeed. Then you'd be quite safe."

Ursula looked interested.

"You don't feel like that yourself, then?"

"I'm afraid not."

A look of subtle distress passed over Hugo's face.

"Are you engaged?" asked him quickly.

"Well, what if I am?" asked him simply.

He stood up, and his manner and tone acquired a sudden touch of stiffness.

"Oh, I am sorry if I've said anything that you don't like," he said.

"You mean that you don't care two straws what I say to you," persisted Hugo, smiling.

"No, I think I meant only, if I meant nothing, that I was ever to get married again, and that I would never let the master from quite such a gloomy point of view, that's all."

"I'm afraid you will have to talk with your man and see if you could make him understand."

Lady Emerson, however, waited to hear what he said.

"Very well," said she; "so I will, some other time."

"I should like to think it over first, and make it out some sort of an argument."

"You think you could argue me out of my views?"

"Oh, no! I shouldn't try."

"You don't care what I think about this?"

"No."

"Then looked very black as he crossed the room with an air of elaborate politeness and opened the door for her.

But then he shut it again.

"What would you do?" said he, "if I had to discuss in corners, you know, and I couldn't tell you, we were bound by law of everybody?"

It must be an old sort of secret if everybody knows it, said Hugo. I am sure it is, but he should like to be the solitary exception.

This was much lamentation, over the loss of two such splendid supers of the possible reasons for their breach of faith. And there was quite a rush of sympathy, and a desire to help.

"That's right, chear the rag!" he retorted.

"Pull out. We're five minutes late."

Britain's Task

British Navy Has Been the Strong Right Arm of the Allies.

Much ill-judged criticism of England's part in the war would never have been made had the critics taken the trouble to acquaint themselves with the facts. In the first place, the first military actions of England at the beginning of the conflict was the sea. Her army was not yet up to strength, her economies of her neighbors, but she had a powerful navy, and it had been, fortunately, well prepared for the task. Thus it was able to shut the German fleet in its own ports, to drive away the U-boats, to blockade and to insure the safe transport of troops. The last-named task was so enormous that it is no exaggeration to say that Britain's greatest averted an irreparable disaster.

More than she did, England could thank the British Army. She had neither the men nor the munitions. Thus the burden of the fight on land fell upon the British on France. That was her allotted duty, and she has performed it. Yet it must be remembered that the English and Belgian troops, though unequal to the task of holding the Germans back, held the important port of Antwerp against an overwhelming force, nevertheless held the coast from Cambrai — from the Philadelphie Ledger.

Wrist Watches

To scholars and sailors, wrist watches are essential necessities. Time plays an important part in advance or returnments. Wrist watches are also most useful because they are too incompressible to be easily damaged. British makers have now produced a new and remarkable glass crystal and are waterproof, dry and strong without any inconvenience to the wearer.

When Buying Matches Specify "Eddy's."*Responsibilities of Germany in Poland*Under an International Obligation to Respect Life and Property.

To the Polish societies of Chicago, I would like to call your attention to conditions in Poland under the German occupation, where "practically every child under seven years of age had died of starvation." President Wilson, I suppose, that he had done all that he could possibly do.

He has appealed to the British and German government to make common cause to stop this human sacrifice (of feeding Poland) to be done." The food contributions go through the blockade under guarantees that they will be used for the benefit of the Poles, and that the central powers in return would look after the starving population. The British government occupy, Germany has declined to give any such guarantees.

The attitude of Germany's attitude which invites the attention of the humane world in respect to starving the Polish people, the conqueror and occupier of Poland, is under international obligations therein to the Polish people, a question from a recognized authority.

Germany is not the only life even of little children starved away into death, in these Polish societies. The Polish Government is striking a primary obligation of the conqueror of Poland, to the Poles, to be willing to assume even a part of the obligation, as in Serbia, in order that the English and Belgian troops, though unequal to the task of holding the Germans back, held the important port of Antwerp against an overwhelming force from Germany — from the coast from Cambrai — from the Philadelphie Ledger.

What is your idea of a political leader?

"One who is able to perceive the way the crowd is going, and follows with loud whoops in that direction."

Minard's Liniment Cures Gout in Cows.

The Automobile and the Newspaper

No other news item has been more popular in polarizing the automobile news in advertising. It has been the automobile business what it is today. It has been the story of the automobile to the consumer. From an unknown factor of a few years ago, the automobile has proved to the farmer that it can be without one. It has shown the difference between the pleasant bridge between home and office, and the doctor's "buggy" is now almost history.

Hundreds have been spent in spreading this knowledge; yet it has returned to the days of the horse and buggy, and because this advertising has created a market where none existed before, the quality has steadily dropped, while the quality has constantly increased.

The ease with which corns and warts can be removed by Holloway's Corn & Wart Remover is a definite recommendation. It seldom fails.

The Avalanche as Italy's Enemy

The worst of dangers in some of the Alpine stations, worse even than the Australian cattlemen, the great 30% of the Alpine stations, is the avalanche and the landslide. The indications of snow movement, which the mountaineer is ever on the watch are no longer perceptible; and at times the avalanche will thunder down and sweep everything away or bury them in their deep.

"We lost forty men and two guns on our march yesterday," said an artillery colonel.

Mild Pill for Delicate Women

The most delicate woman can undergo a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Salve, and get rid of all her digestive sequences. Their action, while wholly effective, is mild and agreeable. No violent purgative is required to remove, as thousands of women who have used them can testify. They are more prone to digest food than women, who are more prone to digest orders of the digestive organs than men.

"Now we will say your mother bought three dozen of oranges, the druggist's price being twenty cents a dozen, how much money would the purchase cost her?"
You can never tell a lie to the head of his class. "Ma's great at bargaining!"

During a lesson on the good Samaritan, the scholars were asked why the Priest and the Levite passed by on the other side.

"Because they saw the man had already been beaten," was one prompt and uncharitable reply. — London Times.

Minard's Liniment Cures Gout, Etc.

"But she says she has never given you any encouragement." "Did she say that?" "She certainly did. She said that if I wanted to go to leave her a fortune, and that he had one foot in the grave. If that is not encouragement, I'd like to know what you call it."

It is almost sure to lose his head. It wouldn't matter if it was only his own roosters that were in danger, but recently one of the neighbors lost a valuable bird and found it had been decapitated by an absent neighbor.

Mr. J. F. Ross has suggested as private detective to follow up the clues and bring the guilty ones to justice.

Some of our sins are due to "force of habit" and some habits are very bad. One of our sins has got the best of me, but I am determined so that if a rooster comes near him, it is almost sure to lose its head. A civic holiday was proclaimed by the town council for last Thursday afternoon to enable the business men to attend the big base ball match. Everybody was well satisfied with the action of the council.

Mr. Flannery's valuable dog paid the penalty of being too vicious, and was shot a few days ago. It was a noble specimen of a dog, but was of little use excepted compared with human life, and so had to go. Several persons have recently been more or less injured by him. The dog has never been quite right since he was exhibited at the Calgary fair.

Our attention has been called to an error in the prize list, last week. In Section 30, Mr. E. A. Malchow has won a box of chocolates, holding powder biscuits, 2nd, lemon pie, 1st, layer cake, 1st, fruit cake, no icing. Robin Hood special, 1st and 2nd was divided between Mrs. Sanford and Mrs. E.
